“6th German-Arab Summer School in Law and Economics”

Institute of Law and Economics (ILE)

Faculty of Law, University of Hamburg

August 2-23, 2017

- Program Description: Governments, parliaments and the judiciary, businesspeople and entrepreneurs, as well as activists and civil society in different Arab countries are in the process of negotiating the future of their countries' legal systems and economic institutions. The Sixth German-Arab Summer School in Law and Economics is particularly interested in highlighting the underlying structures and processes of such changes. Against the background of these new circumstances, the Summer School 2017 offers introductory lectures and workshops in the field of law and economics as well as specific topics addressing, among others, the following questions: How can legal matters be studied from an economic point of view? How do institutions shape the economic foundations and vice versa? How does religion contribute to the legal and economic framework in a given country? What are the legal and socio-economic implications of refugee crisis? and in what regard can terrorism and copy right be analyzed from an economic and legal perspective? The Sixth German-Arab Summer School in Law and Economics will include students from Egypt, Jordan, Tunisia, and Germany.

A total of 16 scholarships for outstanding students from the Arab region are awarded by the German Federal Foreign Office in the framework of the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) transformation partnership to participate at this important event. During the Summer School, students and scholars from the Arab world will meet German students and scholars, thus fostering intercultural and international understanding and accompany the transformation in these Arab countries.
