

Career Objectives

I would best describe myself as an innovative, creative and hard working individual. The bulk of my work experience has been English language teaching. My PhD research covered curriculum and instruction with paying attention to language teaching methodologies, educational leadership, content analysis, teachers' training, statistical analysis and qualitative research. My particular focus was on language learning strategies employed in the classroom by designing an instructional language learning strategies program and implementing it for a period of time on the eighth graders. I am currently looking to work for an academic organization that champions change and efficiency. My career objective now is to work within a business whereby my role is challenging with set targets and objectives. I have a very strong management background and a very successful track of coaching and mentoring high achieving teams and delivering quality services. I want to get involved in something that is much needed and of a valuable support to the communities we live in.
